

The Love Consortium project aims to rapidly advance scientific dialogue about and understanding of the science of love across disciplines and through collaborative projects that use existing data. In this inaugural year, our goals are to (1) accelerate the next generation of rigorous empirical research on the topic of love, broadly defined, and (2) roll out a digital space to foster collaborative research on high-quality loving connections between people, using available data.

This small group meeting brings together experts from a range of fields to share their own expertise in the form of a presentation, and to be part of the broader conversation we are having about what love is, what are the open questions in love research, and how best to study it. We are glad you are here.
